

Impossible Theology

The Christian Evolutionist Dilemma

Mike Gascoigne

If there were millions of years of evolution, before the creation of Adam and Eve, what does the Bible mean when it says they would die as a consequence of eating the forbidden fruit? If they were already mortal, they would die anyway. How can we say that Christ gives us eternal life, and we will rise to immortality, if we were never immortal in the first place?

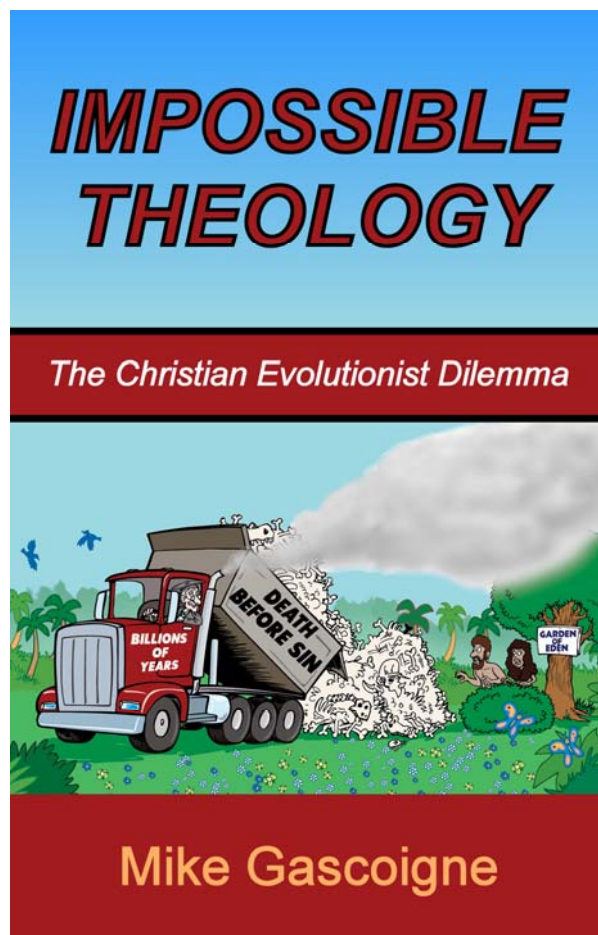

This book attempts to restore the true Gospel, which teaches that Adam and Eve were created immortal, and the complete work of Christ is that we should live with him forever in a world where the pre-fall conditions have been fully restored.

The theological arguments are supplemented with scientific appendices, giving compelling evidence that the world in which we live has been created. There is also a philosophical appendix, showing how life was thought to have come from water, but not in the way that modern evolutionists suppose. Instead, it is a story of survival, through the waters of the Flood.

Mike Gascoigne is a freelance technical author with a background in chemical engineering. He has taken an interest in Biblical topics for about 40 years and is able to bring together a unique blend of science, theology and philosophy.

The main headings are as follows:

Chapter 1	The Real Gospel
Chapter 2	The Pseudo-Gospel
Chapter 3	Keeping the Faith
Appendix 1	The Philosophy of Evolution
Appendix 2	The Impossibility of Chemical Evolution
Appendix 3	The Laws of Thermodynamics
Appendix 4	Cosmology
Appendix 5	Creation Science Resources
Appendix 6	Creation History
References
Index

Paperback, 224pp., March 2004,
ISBN 0954392213.

Available from:

SPCK

Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge
020-7643-0382
www.spckonline.com

Also available from the publisher:
Anno Mundi Books, £9.50 + carriage.

www.annomundi.co.uk

Also by the same author: Forgotten History of the Western People: From the Earliest Origins. Available from the publisher or from a variety of retail outlets, for example:

www.whsmith.co.uk